BRAIN-Y CHOICES

ACTIVITY BOOK

At MADD Canada, we believe it's never too early to start the conversation about the dangers of impaired driving.

This activity book has been designed to encourage a conversation with young children about making smart choices to protect their brains.

While your children are too young to drive and are likely not yet experimenting with alcohol or drugs, now is the time to arm them with the confidence to say no to getting in a vehicle with a driver that could put their safety at risk.

Take this opportunity to talk with your children about when it is ok to refuse a ride with someone and how they should go about saying no to the driver. A simple role-playing exercise can help them understand what they should do if they ever find themselves in this situation. Have them practice refusal lines, such as "No, thank you." "I have to call my parents," and "I promised I would call my parents," when you make the following statements:

- "I'll take you home – you don't want to be late."
- "Don't bother your parents. It's no trouble for me to drive you home."
- "We're ready to go – are you coming?"

If you have older children, MADD Canada, has developed a Brain Power video for students in grades four to six.
